French Antique Reproduction Molds Jumeau

The Jumeau Company has a long history in the doll and toy industries. Our focus is on the bebes which the Jumeau Company produced during their peak production years, the beautiful "Ejs" and the "Tete Jumeaux". Jumeau was the creator of the first bebe or "child" doll with a registered trademark of "Bebe Jumeau". Other companies soon followed suit with their own bebe creations. The Jumeau Company won numerous awards at many World Fairs and trade shows for their line of dolls, not only for their workmanship and innovative ideas, but also for the affordability of their dolls. They were one of the first companies to produce composition bodies and human-like eyes. During their production years, Jumeau produced more dolls than any other French doll manufacturer.

Steiner

Starting his career as a maker of mechanical toys and always on the edge of development and manufacturing, Jules Nicolas Steiner became one of France’s foremost doll makers of the 19th century. His ingenuity and inventiveness secured many patents for him throughout his career, the most popular being, mechanical and articulated dolls, and the talking mechanism. The early bebe heads produced by Steiner were unmarked, but of an exquisite quality. The bisque was the finest available and the painting was very detailed and precise. Typical of the early dolls was the whiteness of the bisque, the rosy cheeks, eyeshadow, and the narrow eye cuts. It is interesting to see how the eye shapes become progressively rounder as the bebe evolved into the 1880s. Even though he was not to be awarded the coveted “Gold Medal” until the Paris Exhibition in 1889, a few short years before we lose trace of his existence, the quality of his dolls attest to his title, “Master Doll Maker.”

French Antique Reproduction Molds

Bru

The Bru Company manufactured some of the most beautiful dolls and faces during the peak years of French doll manufacturing. Their introduction of the “Crescent” or “Circle Dot Bru” in 1879 began what was to become the most productive era of the Bru Company. Next, this led the company into the Chevrot era which encompasses the creation of the “Bru Jne” face and hands. This was Bru’s golden age in which the most beautiful dolls were created. Because Bru’s award-winning doll manufacturing company produced fewer dolls than their competitor, Jumeau, Bru dolls are more desirable to the antique doll collector and demand a high price today. To the reproduction artist, both Bru’s and Jumeaus, are sought after creations.

French Fashion & Lady Dolls
The term “Fashion Dolls” is used by many to designate a particular type of doll. The era of the Fashion, or Lady Dolls’, greatest popularity was between 1860 and 1890. The majority of these dolls had bisque heads, wigs and leather or cloth-covered bodies. The bodies were shaped to give the impression of an adult woman’s figure. It should be noted that not all “fashions” originally wore high fashion clothing. Some were originally in costumes of various provinces, as well as the city of Paris. It is safe to say the majority of these dolls were dressed and used as fashion samples.

German Antique Reproductions

Kestner
Johannes Daniel Kestner, Jr. is by far the most well-known of all the German doll makers and should probably be regarded as the "Father of the Waltershausen Doll Industry," since he was most certainly the first in the area. Kestner was more than likely the only company to produce both heads and bodies, thereby producing its own complete doll. Of all the German character babies produced, Kestner's "Hilda" has captured the hearts of collectors and reproduction artists through the ages. The Kestner company subsequently rode out World War I and the Great Depression and finally merged with Kammer & Reinhardt in 1930.

German Antique Reproductions
Heubach
Gerbruder Heubach was one of the earlier doll manufacturing companies in Germany. Heubach is primarily known for its character dolls, piano babies, figurines and all bisque dolls. Another noted characteristic of their firm was the intaglio eyes. These eyes had molded details as well as a raised white dot and in most cases the pupil and iris were recessed to achieve realism and a wide range of expressions. Some say the molded hair found on a majority of these dolls was adopted for cost effectiveness. It may have also been a throwback to the molded haired Parisians. Heubach also produced doll-faced dolls prior to the firm's character dolls, a distinctive feature of its output.

German Antique Reproductions Babies
Character Babies began to appear after the turn of the century as part of the movement toward lifelike dolls. The bodies were constructed of composition or cloth to resemble the natural pose of a baby. These dolls have a timeless appeal and continue to capture the hearts of doll artists today.*
